The COVID-19 pandemic has been difficult on everyone—practitioners and their staff, horse owners, trainers, the AAEP, and the companies that help support the equine community—but the common denominator is that we’re all managing our businesses through this crisis as best we can.

The AAEP recently reached out to the nearly 300 companies exhibiting in the trade show this December at our 66th Annual Convention in Las Vegas. These companies are devoted to helping you practice to your fullest potential through their product and service offerings as well as their support of equine continuing education.

Some are currently offering specials to further help equine veterinarians during this difficult time. These companies and the details of their specials are presented on the next few pages, followed by a listing with contact information for all other exhibitors should you need to contact them before the convention.

We hope this information will be of assistance as you manage through current challenges. For other relevant resources, don’t forget about the COVID-19 page at aaep.org that provides many other resources to help your practice, as well as the AAEP’s new online CE programs.

If the AAEP can be of further assistance to you during these unusual and trying times, please let us know.

Sincerely,
David L. Foley, CAE

The Equine Disease Communication Center needs your help to continue our efforts to protect and improve the health of horses by providing real-time alerts and disease information. Join us in the search and publication of infectious diseases.

HOW WE KEEP YOU PREPARED

1. Once an infectious disease is confirmed by a state or attending veterinarian, a report is submitted to the EDCC.

2. The information is entered into the database and then posted on the EDCC alert page.

3. Alerts are then sent to subscribers by email and published on social media.

4. Information on the website lets you prepare for disease outbreaks.

For the mobile app version of our online alert system, search "EDCC Disease Alerts" for a free download.
